

The International Country Music Database grows to over 1000 artists

The International Country Music Database (ICMDb) strives to be the most complete country music database on the Internet. This week, the database crossed the 1000 artists mark.

Austin, TX October 1st, 2007 -- Continuing towards the goal of having the most complete database of country music artists (past, present, and future) on the Internet (www.icmdb.com), artists are continually added to the ICMDb database. The number of artists currently in the database has now grown to over 1000 artists.

Artists found in the database include classic artists like Roy Acuff, Porter Wagoner, and Johnny Cash; current hit makers like Kenny Chesney, Keith Urban, and Carrie Underwood; new artists like Jake Owen, Taylor Swift, and Eric Church; independent artists like Daniel Lee Martin, Sharmian, and Todd Fritsch; and international artists like Adam Harvey, Aaron Pritchett, and Lucie Diamond.

Information provided for each artist includes a link to their site (if available), a link to their MySpace page (if available), tour information, latest album released, discography, news items, and general facts and trivia information. CD and concert reviews and artist interviews are also available on the site.

ICMDb continues to add artists and is planning to focus more on international artists (any country music artist outside the US) in the future. Artists who do not find themselves listed in the database should contact ICMDb to be added.

The International Country Music Database is in its third year of providing country music news and information. The site is owned by Duval Media Group, LLC, based in Austin, TX.
